Student Learning Outcomes
B.A. in Leadership & Organizational Studies

- Apply concepts from organization theory to practice, and analyze how organizations are affected by local, national, and global contexts.
- Describe and identify different views of leading and leadership, and distinguish between industrial era leadership and an expanded paradigm of leadership.
- Perform effectively as a team member, assess their own and fellow team members' performance, analyze the benefits and challenges of team work, and analyze how team work relates to various concepts of leadership.
- Integrate experience and theoretical learning, connecting experiential learning with academic learning and applying academic learning to practice.
- Assess their own ethical values and analyze ethical issues related to leadership and to organizational settings.
- In partnership with a community organization and through collaborative leadership with team members, plan and implement a capstone community-based research project, including data collection and analysis, and present findings and recommendations orally and as a written report.
