

SOC 004-01: Social Problems

Instructor: Phillip Fucella

Time: M/T/W/TH 9:00AM - 11:45AM

Room: TBD

Contact: pnf2@stmarys-ca.edu

- The contemporary world has many social concerns that capture our attention. Talk show hosts and social critics popularize these issues which range from global problems, like the environment, to interpersonal problems, like divorce. Topics such as racism, sexism, heterosexism, classism, urban poverty, and the changing family are explored in this class. Sociology examines the factors at play in creating and solving these problems. The class counts toward the Core Curriculum's Social, Historical, and Cultural Understanding, American Diversity, and Common Good requirements.