Whose Line Was it Anyway?

Collaboration & Intellectual Property in Writing Centers

Katherine Hahn, Sabrina Nguyen, Tereza Joy Kramer
Saint Mary's College of California
Crossing Conference, Reno 2017
The Issue: Autonomy of Student Writing

- Minimalistic collaboration used in some writing centers intends to ensure that the resulting writing is 100% student work.
- A ‘pervasive cultural concern with intellectual property rights’ breeds distrust of collaboration (Clark 157).
Research Questions

1. Are ideas discovered during sessions partially the intellectual property of the writing adviser?

1. Should students cite advisers as sources?

It is important to define collaboration & plagiarism so advisers can understand their impact.
Research Methodology

❖ IRB training and approval
❖ Survey questions
❖ Survey participants
❖ Analyzed and coded results
➢ Statistical analysis
Statistical Results

Do you think students should cite advisers as sources?

- Yes: 66.7%
- No: 33.3%
Have you ever personally felt that your ideas were being appropriated in a session?

- Yes: 50%
- No: 50%
Overarching themes

Empowerment
Effective Communication
Balance
Rules
Empowerment

❖ Students become better writers
❖ Moral & ethical understanding
❖ Motivation of the writer
❖ Can collusion lead to empowerment?
Effective Communication

- Equal effort and work
- Adviser guides students
  - Readerly response & questioning
  - Generating of ideas
  - Exploring point of view
Balance

❖ Refusal to collaborate
❖ Imbalance
❖ Minimalism
❖ Accountability
❖ Influencing ideas
❖ Social construction of knowledge
Rules: Academic Honor Code

To do my own work...without giving or receiving inappropriate aid.

To avoid behaviors that unfairly impede the academic progress of other members.

To take reasonable and responsible action in order to uphold...academic integrity.
Rules

❖ Ambiguity
❖ Creation
❖ Types of plagiarism
Is There True Minimalism?

If advisers wonder about being cited, are they truly minimalistic?

When is it most productive to exchange ideas?

Ideal: ‘Centers serve as sites of collaboration that challenge hierarchies and traditional ways of producing knowledge ...’
(Lunsford and Ede 370)
Limitations & Recommendations for Further Research

Collect a larger sample
Survey student writers
Conduct follow-up interviews
Consider analyzing data by discipline
Develop questions based on the four themes

... & Implications ...?
Workshop

Pairs: one person is the writing adviser & one person is the writer

❖ Scenario 1

➢ The writer comes in with a comedic screenplay and is struggling to complete several of the jokes. The adviser gets excited and blurts out their own punchlines over the course of the session and the writer uses them in their script.

❖ Scenario 2

➢ The writer comes in with a prompt and as they are brainstorming ideas the adviser helps by paraphrasing what they’re hearing the writer say. The writer only writes down exactly how the adviser phrases their ideas instead of writing it down in their own words.
Thank you!

Whose Line Was it Anyway?

Collaboration & Intellectual Property in Writing Centers

Katherine Hahn, Sabrina Nguyen, Tereza Joy Kramer
plus researchers Annie Keig and Kiersten Kolte
Saint Mary’s College of California, Crossing Conference Reno 2017
In Appreciation

We offer appreciation to Lead Writing Adviser Annie Keig, who initiated this project with her creative ideas, and to Writing Adviser Kierstin Kolte, who participated in the brainstorming and research.

We also appreciate the support and guidance of Peter Alter, IRB Chair, and Sheila Hassell Hughes, Dean of the School of Liberal Arts.

